You must provide Australian Health Practitioner's Regulation Agency (AHPRA) with these country names.
Ireland, United Kingdom

I understand that if I ask Fit2work to do an international criminal history check for me:

- Fit2work will provide to AHPRA my complete criminal history outside Australia, including resolved and unresolved charges, convictions for offences (including spent convictions and unrecorded convictions), and every plea of guilty or finding of guilt by a court for an offence;
- the National Health Practitioner Board ('Board') from which I seek registration (or its delegate) may take this criminal history into account when making a decision on my application for registration and managing my continued registration (including, for example, by refusing my application or imposing conditions on my registration); and
- AHPRA and the Board may use and disclose my personal information as explained in the privacy collection statement relevant to my application, which I have read and is available at: <http://www.ahpra.gov.au/About-AHPRA/Privacy.aspx>
- Fit2work may include as part of my application for an international criminal history check both 'disclosed' and 'discovered' information including previous address history and previous/alias names.

Consent Asked For

If you tick 'No', you cannot apply to Fit2work for an international criminal history check. You will have to obtain this check by other means to complete your application for registration.

Agreed

Consent Response

The information provided is a record only that a check has been conducted and is not evidence of suitability or assessment for an employment / engagement decision.
